New York Stock Market

New York, April 13.—Trading was again of an altogether perfunctory nature on the stock market to-day. The market developed no discernible tendency in either direction, and prices moved in an unusual downward range. With three days' intervening before the next session of the exchange, traders did not wish to commit themselves to new enterprises, especially in view of the fact that next Monday, when business is to be resumed, is the Supreme Court "decisions day," and may bring rulings in the anti-trust cases.

Prices at the end of the day in most cases were within small fractions of the close of the preceding session, and the total number of shares traded in was close to the low point of the year. Missouri Pacific fluctuated more widely than any of the other active stocks, and made a small net gain on the day. The short interest in this stock is believed to have been extended largely on its recent severe deciline, and covering of contracts doubtless was largely responsible for its rally. United States Steel showed distinct heaviness at times, and there were intervals of weakness in Reading, Unior Pacific and other leaders. Pennsylvania was sold freely and lost ground on the day.

Speculation was not influenced by
